compound tonic, agreeable in taste, pleasant in action and highly beneficial in results. It forms one of the most valuable tonics and correctives ever yet offered to the public. It is especially adapted to any lesion of the hepatic, gastrie or renal functions arising from sedentary occupation, exposure to night air, or any other exciting cause. Its freedom from any mineral constituent, makes it most desirable as a household remody. This valuable preparation is the celebrated Home Samarius Coadiat. It is now put up in handsome cartoons, and sold by Druggists and dealers ginerally. See advertisement.
